Mexico is only 1 point better than Russia on the global corruption index, but it's 45 points better on the global freedom index (both indices go from 1-100). My quick impression (from two trips and a few friends) is that the Mexican people are willing to tolerate a corrupt government so long as it doesn't step on their freedoms.

Step 1, Evaluate the travel journal's size. It should be small enough to carry with you unobtrusively, but not so tiny that writing in it or reading it is difficult. If you're going to be traveling for a long time, odds are that you're going to be living in one or two pairs of pants and carrying one pack or purse with you constantly. Check to make sure any journals you're considering will either fit ...Step 2, Eyeball the journal's format. Most journals will have evenly ruled pages, but if ...

A5 is also extremely common in notebooks. (In fact, the only countries this standard is not common is the USA, Canada & Mexico). The B series of standard sizes is also quite common, especially in Japanese and Korean notebooks. TIP: The handy way to remember the relationship of any of the A sizes, is that each size is half of the smaller number. So A4 is half of A3, A5 is half of A4, A6 is half of A5 and A7 is half of A6.

How To FindThe Perfect Traveler's Notebook Size For You ...

In the US, Canada, and Mexico, the standard paper size is Letter size: 8.5" x 11". Outside of North America, however, Letter size is rarely used. 1 Instead, other countries use a system of paper sizes that may seem confusing at first but is actually quite simple and logical once you understand the methodology behind it.
