This is because the seemingly contradictory drives behind these approaches— power, the desire to achieve one’s purpose, and love, the urge to unite with others—are actually complementary. As Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. put it, “Power without love is reckless and abusive, and love without power is sentimental and anemic.”

Power and Love: A Theory and Practice of Social Change ...

Adam Kahane argues that each is a reflection of two distinct, fundamental drives: power, the single-minded desire to achieve one’s solitary purpose; and love, the drive towards unity. They are inextricable parts of human nature, so to achieve lasting change you have to be able to work fluidly with both.

Adam Kahane - Power and Love: A theory and practice of social change

I think love is a power. There is power based on fear which is the ability to assert your will even against the will of others; and there is power rooted in love which is the ability to be all you can be and to want others to be all that they can be. I just read the book applying this concept and it was really powerful.

Power and Love speaks to an Integral approach to addressing the problems we have created using a previously one-sided approach of power OR love. If this book falls light anywhere, it is in not providing more explicit guidance on how to bring about the balance between the two energies of Power and Love.
