Jacinda Townsend (Author of Saint Monkey) - Goodreads

Jacinda Townsend is a wonderful writer who makes you feel all kinds of complicated emotions. The main characters — Audrey and Caroline (Pookie) — start out as two young black girls in rural Kentucky. The girls are best friends with a thread of animosity running between them. The trauma of death in their families both unites and divides them.

Talk about timing! With relations between African-American men and women in the spotlight as never before, here comes McMillan's report from the front: her bawdy, vibrant, deliciously readable third novel (Mama, Disappearing Acts) is the story of four black women friends and their frequently disastrous encounters with black men. The four are in their mid-to-late 30s, middle-class women making ...
